DOCTOR WHO

ARC OF INFINITY (Series 6E)

When a detailed description of the Doctor's molecular structure — a Bio Pattern — is stolen from the Matrix on Gallifrey, the High Council of Time Lords have no option but to urgently summon the Doctor to his home planet.

Omega (IAN COLLIER), the Doctor's latest adversary.

The Time Lords fear that the Bio Pattern is needed to complete a bonding with the Doctor, enabling a creature constructed of anti-matter to survive in the matter universe. So catastrophic would be the result of this union that the High Council decides the Doctor must die to prevent it happening. Nyssa and the Doctor are convinced that a fifth columnist among the Time Lords is aiding the anti-matter source — whoever or whatever it might be. But their protestations are ignored and the Doctor is condemned to termination.

But the execution programme is mysteriously intercepted and the Doctor finds his mind imprisoned in the Matrix — a fate marginally preferable to termination. His adversary is revealed as the formidable renegade Time Lord Omega, who, following his previous attempt to conquer the universe, was banished to the world of anti-matter.

Omega now controls the space-time Matrix and is hiding on Earth, in Amsterdam, and holding the Doctor's former travelling companion, Tegan, hostage. Using the stolen Bio Pattern, Omega plans to transfer to the Doctor's body and resume his physical life as a Time Lord. Omega extracts the Doctor's promise to co-operate and rematerialises him on Gallifrey.

Councillor Hedin has been uncovered as the Gallifreyan 'mole' who is communicating with Omega. Convinced of the Doctor's innocence and the need to obstruct Omega's return to the positive universe, the High Council send Nyssa and the Doctor to Amsterdam via a Time Loop. But the Doctor is not in time to prevent Omega metamorphosing into an exact replica of himself.

There follows a battle of wits and a spectacular chase around the old city culminating in Omega's defeat on Amsterdam's famous 'Skinny' Bridge.

DOCTOR WHO

SNAKEDANCE (Series 6D)

On a visit to the planet of Deva Loka the Doctor and his companions had encountered the Mara, an evil spirit which had infiltrated Tegan's mind. The Doctor had believed it to be banished to its "Inside World," but Tegan's subconscious is still in the insidious grip of the Mara, which exerts its power by re-directing the TARDIS to its home world of Manussa, from whence it was exiled several hundred years ago by the Federation.

PETER DAVISON (centre) as the Doctor engaged in a dual of wills with the evil force of the Mara.

Manussa is still under the rule of the Federation, but the history of the Mara and its evil reign has degenerated into legend, a half-forgotten story used mainly for attracting tourists to the notorious Snake Caves where the Mara was supposedly vanquished. The TARDIS materialises in a bazaar on Manussa. The Doctor is mystified by the destination, but quickly guesses that Tegan has succumbed to the influence of the Mara. He equips Tegan with an Anti-Dreaming Device which blocks the suggestions of the Mara, but she runs off and disappears in the bustle and confusion of the bazaar.

The Doctor is convinced that the Mara is plotting to re-establish its tyranny over the Manussians and the forthcoming 10-yearly celebration of its defeat, held in the Snake Caves, seems an apt occasion for what is known in Manussian folklore as the Return.

Lon is the heir apparent of the Federation. He, his mother Tanha, and the Director of Research, Ambril, are unmoved by the Doctor's warnings.

Initially they tolerate him as a harmless eccentric, but when the Doctor insists the approaching ceremony be cancelled, their patience snaps and he is put under lock and key.

Lon is an indolent and spoilt young man with no interest in Manussian traditions or the duties of a ruler. His bored and lazy mind is an easy prey for the Mara who, still in Tegan's body, entices him to the Caves. The Mara commands Lon to ensure that the Great Crystal is brought along to the ceremony. Known as the "Great Mind's Eye," the crystal has the power to absorb mental energy from individual minds. By consuming this energy, the Mara plans to regain control of the minds of the Manussians.

Languishing in his cell, the Doctor despairs at being unable to prevent the Mara's triumphant return, and Tegan's death. But Ambril's assistant, Chela, believes in the Legend of the Return, and releases Nyssa and the Doctor. Chela directs them to Dojjen, a snakedancer who has spent his life studying the ways and philosophy of the Mara. Dojjen is the Doctor's only hope of defeating the Mara. Under his guidance, the Doctor engages in a spectacular dual of wills with the evil force, and succeeds in releasing Tegan once and for all from the Mara's control.

DOCTOR WHO

MAWDRYN UNDEAD (Series 6F)

A public schoolboy, a race of mutants and Doctor Who's old enemy, The Black Guardian, combine to pose a serious threat to the Doctor's continuing existence as a Time Lord in Mawdryn Undead.

On board a mysterious opulent space ship, the Doctor (PETER DAVISON), his old friend, the Brigadier (NICHOLAS COURTNEY) and doubtful ally, Turlough (MARK STRICKSON) (left) prepare to face a powerful force.

The TARDIS, its instruments jammed, is forced to materialise on an opulent, but ostensibly deserted, space ship. The ship is in a fixed orbit round Earth, 1983, and the source of the jamming is a radio beacon on that planet guiding a transmat capsule. The Doctor is forced to investigate if he hopes to release the TARDIS.

The Doctor travels to Earth in the transmat capsule found on the space ship. Nyssa and Tegan follow in the TARDIS, but unfortunately the radio beacon again interferes with the co-ordinates, and they materialise in 1977 — six years ahead of the Doctor.

The Black Guardian has recruited the services of a young man, Turlough, to assassinate the Doctor. Turlough is an alien stranded on Earth and is masquerading as a pupil at a boarding-school where the Doctor's old friend, Brigadier Lethbridge-Stewart, is teaching. The Doctor meets Turlough and the Brigadier in the school grounds in 1983. Not one to be fooled by time differentials, he quickly realises what has become of Tegan and Nyssa. The Doctor returns to the space ship accompanied by the Brigadier and Turlough, ignorant of the menace posed by the latter.

Meanwhile, back in 1977 . . . Tegan and Nyssa stumble across the decaying body of a man. Believing it to be the Doctor in a state of prematurely triggered regeneration, they seek medical help and find the Brigadier — the 1977 version. 'The Doctor' is really Mawdryn, leader of the mutants who are in a state of suspended animation on the space ship. The mutants stole a regeneration machine from the Time Lords, but their attempts to attain immortality backfired and they are doomed to a state of endless degeneration — unless they are aided by a sympathetic Time Lord. 'The Doctor' persuades Tegan and Nyssa to return him to the space ship, and the Brigadier goes along, unaware that he is courting danger. For both Brigadiers now exist in the same time zone — a fatal concept because if the two Brigadiers were to meet, there would be an upheaval in time, creating an enormous explosion.

Safely back on the space ship Mawdryn reveals his true identity to the Doctor and his companions. Nyssa and Tegan have been contaminated with the degenerative process — they too are condemned to remain on the ship lest they accelerate the mutation. Mawdryn blackmails the Doctor into agreeing to surrender his remaining eight lives as a Time Lord to release the mutants and the girls from their perpetual wandering in space. But Mawdryn does not anticipate the timely intervention of the two Brigadiers . . .

DOCTOR WHO

TERMINUS (Series 6G)

The Doctor's new companion Turlough remains under the malign influence of the Black Guardian and is directed to damage the TARDIS' console. The ship rapidly begins to dissolve and, as a fail-safe measure, attaches itself to a nearby space liner. Liza Goddard and Dominic Guard make guest appearances in this story in which the Doctor is faced with the awesome task of preventing the Second Big Bang.

The liner is deserted apart from two space pirates, Kari and Olvir, who have boarded in a search for booty. Only when the liner docks with a massive derelict floating in space is the ominous character of the ship revealed, for Olvir realizes their destination is Terminus...

The ship's cargo is Lazars — space lepers who are being transported by a commercial company to Terminus for a 'cure'. The patients are processed by the Vanir, a slave race also suffering from the disease who are kept alive by drugs provided by the Company. Nyssa is contaminated with Lazar disease and is herded along with other sufferers into the forbidden area at the centre of Terminus. There she is collected by the Garm, a gigantic creature, half-man, half-beast, who is controlled by the Vanir and whose function is to expose Lazar victims to a massive dose of radiation in the hope that it will cure them.

The Doctor and Kari are puzzled by a co-ordinate reading which suggests that Terminus is at the exact centre of the universe. The answer to the riddle of the derelict is found in the control room; as a functioning ship she had jettisoned some fuel into a space void and the subsequent explosion was the Big Bang which created the universe. The one remaining engine is now in an unstable condition and about to explode. The Doctor enlists the help of the Garm to disconnect the engine seconds before the Big Bang which would have destroyed the universe.

Cured by the Garm's treatment, Nyssa sees an opportunity to use her training in bio-electronics to help the Vanir run Terminus as a successful hospital ship. Reluctantly, the Doctor agrees to leave Nyssa on board the liner.

Kari is played by Liza Goddard whose television credits include the popular television series The Brothers and Take Three Girls. Dominic Guard, who appeared in the BBC drama Maybury, takes the role of Olvir.

DOCTOR WHO

ENLIGHTENMENT (Series 6H)

When the White Guardian appears on the TARDIS with an urgent warning, the Doctor is propelled into a nautical adventure with a difference. Following co-ordinates dictated by the White Guardian, the TARDIS materializes on what appears to be an Edwardian racing yacht. The Doctor and his companions are greeted hospitably by Captain Striker and his officers, who have been expecting their arrival.

The Edwardian yacht turns out to be a space ship piloted by Eternals — parasitic aliens who feed off the thoughts and emotions of humans, known contemptuously as Ephemerals. Bored with the amount of time on their hands, the Eternals devise 'amusements'. In this case the amusement is a race through the solar system between period sailing ships manned by Ephemerals borrowed from the past. The prize for the winner is

'enlightenment', total knowledge and experience which would enable Eternals to attain existence.

Turlough is still the reluctant agent of the Black Guardian and attempts to escape his influence by suicidally jumping into space. But he is rescued by Captain Wrack, female commander of the pirate ship The Buccaneer, a leading contender in the race. Two ships are destroyed, presumed hit by asteroids. Turlough, however, discovers that Wrack is using a concentrated beam of mental energy, derived from the power of the Black Guardian, to obliterate her rivals.

Suspecting Striker's yacht to be the next target, the Doctor boards The Buccaneer and discovers Wrack's power source, managing to eject her into space. The Doctor pilots the ship into port and inadvertently wins the race.

As victor, the Doctor is offered 'enlightenment' by both the Black and White Guardians, but declines. Turlough, in turn, is offered the prize, and by rejecting 'enlightenment' neutralizes the Black Guardian's power and escapes his influence.

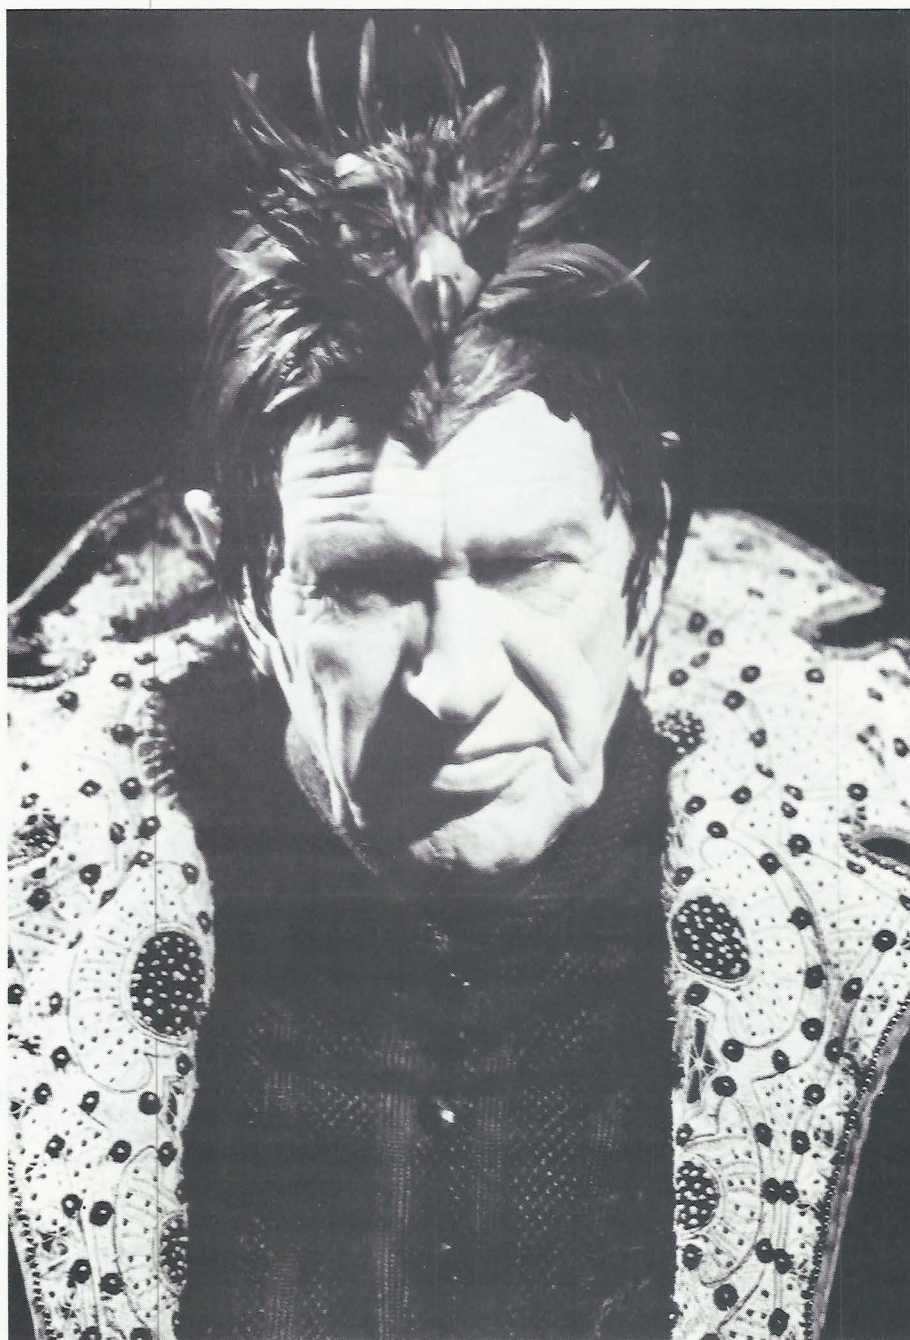

Captain Striker is played by Keith Barron, who appeared in the acclaimed BBC drama Jessie, written and directed by Bryan Forbes. Lynda Baron, who takes the part of Nurse Gladys Emmanuel in Ronnie Barker's popular comedy series Open All Hours, plays the villainous Captain Wrack.

DOCTOR WHO

THE KING'S DEMONS (Series 6J)

The TARDIS interrupts a jousting match in 13th century England in The King's Demons. Guest of honour at the medieval tournament is King John. Strangely unperturbed by the materialisation of a 'blue engine' from thin air, the King welcomes the Doctor and his colleagues and offers them protection as his 'demons'.

Sir Gilles challenges the young Hugh to deadly combat. (From left) The King (GERALD FLOOD), Ranulf (FRANK WINDSOR), Isabella (ISLA BLAIR), Hugh (CHRISTOPHER VILLIERS) and Sir Gilles (ANTHONY AINLEY).

Lord Ranulf and Lady Isabella, the King's hosts, are concerned at the change in their monarch's behaviour. His customary benevolence and generosity have been replaced by a sinister vindictiveness. The Doctor himself is suspicious of the influence exerted over King John by his champion, the French knight Sir Gilles Estram.

Ranulf's cousin, Sir Geoffrey de Lacey, returns from London where he claims to have just left King John. De Lacey is condemned to death for his treacherous suggestion that the King is an impostor. While trying to save de Lacey, the Doctor is tricked into a duel with Sir Gilles. Defeated in a spectacular sword fight, Sir Gilles reveals his true identity as the Doctor's old foe, the Master.

As a mild amusement, the Master plans to thwart the signing of Magna Carta, thus preventing the inception of parliamentary democracy in England — 'small-time villainy' as the Doctor comments. The instrument of the Master's schemes is a sophisticated android, Kamelion, who, under the direction of the Master's will, can adopt any form, and is successfully impersonating King John.

The Master convinces the medieval court that the Doctor is, in fact, a demon sent to destroy the King. The Doctor has no option but to engage his adversary in a titanic battle of wills for control of Kamelion and the fate of Magna Carta.

Ranulf is played by Frank Windsor, who made his name in the acclaimed BBC Television series Softly, Softly. Isla Blair, who starred in Love Story: Alexa and the BBC production of The History Man, takes the part of Lady Isabella.

DOCTOR WHO THE FIVE DOCTORS

Twenty years ago the world's longest running science-fiction show started on television. This special 90 minutes adventure entitled The Five Doctors and written by Terrance Dicks celebrates the anniversary in glorious style.

The current Doctor, Peter Davison, is joined in this story by his predecessors, Patrick Troughton, Jon Pertwee and Tom Baker. The original Doctor Who, the late William Hartnell, is seen briefly in vintage footage but in this programme his role is taken by Richard Hurndall.

As well as appearances by the five Doctors, the programme also features many of those who have travelled with him over the years. Carole Ann Ford, who played the Doctor's grand-daughter Susan in the first ever episode appears, as does Nicholas Courtney in his famous role of the Brigadier and Elisabeth Sladen as Sarah Jane Smith. The current regulars of Janet Fielding (Tegan) and Mark Strickson (Turlough) are also involved in the action, along with K9, the mobile computer shaped like a dog, and Bessie the vintage car from the Pertwee days. Among the Doctor's adversaries are The Master, played by Anthony Ainley, and a host of the famous monsters who have appeared to such effect in the adventures throughout the years.

MARK STRICKSON as Turlough and PETER DAVISON as The Doctor.

JON PERTWEE as The Doctor and ELISABETH SLADEN as Sarah Jane.

This special anniversary story finds the present Doctor (Peter Davison) and his earlier selves lifted out of time and placed on Gallifrey, the Time Lords' own planet. It is not the most pleasant of home-comings, however, for they are placed in the Death Zone along with some of their former companions, and are confronted by a variety of monsters, including the Daleks and the Cybermen. In order to assist in the rescue of the Doctor the inner cabinet of Gallifrey (Lord President Borusa, Chancellor Flavia and the Castellan) enlists the aid of old adversary The Master.

The Five Doctors is a glorious reunion of many old characters from the series and anyone who has ever enjoyed the show should find much in it to entertain and delight them.

RICHARD HURNDALL, PETER DAVISON, JON PERTWEE and PATRICK TROUGHTON as The Doctors.
